

Choosing the correct dog collar

Ancol are the only company to offer this system of collar sizing to help your staff and your customers select and identify the correct collar for their dog.

The Ancol system uses the breed of dog as a guideline but also includes a special tape, which converts accurately to the correct neck size. Collars are sized from 1-9, which makes recognition and remembering the size a lot easier.

The Ancol collars are adjustable in all cases so that a fair degree of flexibility exists between the sizes.

The adjustability of the collar means that for every dog there will be at least two collar sizes that will be acceptable and of comfortable fit.

Product labels highlight the size and clearly differentiates the collars from leads when on display. A collar tape is also provided for accurate measurement.

The catalogue shows both Ancol and conventional sizes for collars but as a quick reference guide the following tables show the standard range conversion.

Choosing the correct dog coat

Due to the size variance of dog sizes within each breed Ancol strongly recommend that every dog is measured before a coat is purchased. Customers need to measure between the neck and the base of the tail of their dog. This information is clearly displayed on every pack to make it easy for your customer to make the right selection.
